By the Blue rolling Waters, By the blue rolling waters Of Schuyikili, I stood, When her beautiful daughters Were washed in the flood; And thousands were round me, All silent they were, or the spell which had bound me, Bound each of them there.

All gazed with emotion On each as they came, When the purest devotion Seem'd turning to flame, But the heart burning feeling I feit for them then, When the lovely were kneeling,

I shall ne'er feel again. By the sighs and the tears Which flow'd on that morn by the hopes and the fears By many hearts borne, May I never, ye daughtern! Forget when ye stood

LETTER III.

Philadelphia, June 18th, 1823.

Dear Huss—Belove I began to travel I was acquainted with only two perplexities worthy of notice in trading; first, a difficulty in finding articles agreeable to my wishes—and second, when found, a want sometimes of sufficient eash to purchase them. Since my arrival at Philadelphia, I have experienced a third equally unpleasant, from its tantalizing effects. Articles perfectly consonant with my desires have been displayed before me, and I have even ordered them to be laid aside, not doubting that I had money enough with me to purchase; but, on enquiring the price, have been totally unable to understand the answer, or to know whether the contents of my pockets would know whether the contents of my pockets would have satisfied the demand. You are ready to ask if the Philadelphians do not speak the English language?—They do.—But, really, some words language: — They do.—But, really, some worus they use, especially on pecuniary subjects, sound very harsh and unintelligible to the ear of a Virginian. To elucidate more fully my meaning, I will give you an account of a few incidents relative to this subject.

since I called on Joseph to take A few cays since I called on Joseph to take a walk.—By-the-bye, you shall hereafter have an account of my accidental meeting with this our estemed friend, and of some highly interesting incidents in his life, since he bade farewell to the companions of his youth, and launched forth to seek his fortune on the wide ocean of life. After taking a circuitous ramble though the eits we aking a circuitous ramble through the city, we at length found ourselves in Chesnut street. Being n want of a watch ribbon and seeing some ex-nibited at a window, we entered the shop and had infilted at a window, we entered the shop and had them displayed before us. I selected one that pleased my fancy, and, as I have always made it a practice, asked the price before paying for it.— The gentleman answered: "three leven penny bits." These were the first words I had heard him utter, and beheving them to be impure English, arising from some foreign corruption, I glanced a scruti-nizing look at him to see if I could discern the features of a Greek or Hebrew. In a moment, however, I was convinced that he was neither; for he, magining I was surprosed at the high price of the article, began, with the true spirit of an expethe article, began, with the true spirit of an e-rienced veteran of the yard-stick, to lavish bounded praise on the superior quality of the goods. Joseph saw the dilemma in which I was placed, and kindly relieved me by saying:—"He seans thirty-even and a half cents, or in Virginia ineans thirty-even and a half cents, or in Virginia currency, two and three pence." The gentleman laughed heartily at this singular manner of recknowing, as I gave him half a dollar and he returned what he called a few,—We departed, not a little amused with this trifling incident. But this was only the beginning of such things.

We were fatigued with the length of our walk and entered one of the places of fashionable resort.

Philadelphia a cake, those for refreshments.

in Philadelphia—a cake shop—for refreshment-After gratifying our appetites with the good lady's ice-cream, queen cakes, ladies' fingers, cordials &c I enquired what was to be paid.—She paused a moment, and answered in a quick and unintended tone—"Three-quarter dollars, 'leven-perbit, fip penny bit and three cents." Imagining Imagining the bit, np penny bit and three cents." Imagining the bil exceeded the loose change of any person's pocket, I left for my pocket-book, but to my sor-row I found I had left it at home. I was on the point of completing my embarrassment by telling point of compreting my emparassiment by testing the lady, I had not money enough to pay the bill, but I was saved from this humbling confession by the interposition of my friend, who had been con-versing with a person in another part of the room. "Edward," said lie, "what is the matter now, are you again embarrassed with the sound of levy and fips ?! "Lend me a five dollar note," said !
"to pay this bill, and depend on it, I will avoid it such an unpleasant occurrence. must be wrong in your reckoning; it cannot require five dellars to pay for our refreshments—
"Madam," continued he, "what is your bill!"
"Only one dellar, wanting ——" At the sound of intelligible English again, I thrust my hand into my pocket and flung two half dollars on the counter, to prevent her from producing any more confusion by the sound of fitte. There cents was confusion by the sound of bits. Three cents was which she returned. This served to ist me in discovering the meaning of the words ich she had used. I took leave of the good lady, and soon after bade my friend good morning.

This inconvenience is not peculiar to Philadelphia. A stranger will meet with the same in every state in the Union. If it were a secessary evil we might guard against it as one of that class, but it is not;—the reason for its continuance arises from the difficulty of reforming old customs. It is, however, becoming unfashionable, and I hope the time is not far distant, when the public will see the great advantages of reckoning according to the United States currency, and entirely explode the mutilated sterms of English money.

Yours with sentiments of the highest friendship, EDWARD. night guard against it as one of that class, but i

This interesting little volume is intended as a companion, or appendix, to a similar production, by the same author, entitled "Ways and Messa," and is dedicated, "without perfusion," in His Excellency 5. L. Mighle, who, among ans other numerous titles has long held that of President of the distinguished Star Krists Club, as Hoboken, opposite the city of Gotham. This writes, though young, and exhibiting many inaccuracies of style and expression, bids fair to become a bright and shining ornament to the literature of our country; and from the engraving profixed to his new work, we judge him at once, from his sleek glossy constenance, and ease luving, inoffensive, good natured sort of an eye, to be perfectly "at home," and master of his subject. Besides, the general appearance of the author, which said appearance, we presume to assert, is in most cases an excellent criticism;—we say, besides, his physiognomy (to use a beautiful simile, "as round and as plump as a partridge,") his very appropriate motto, and the manner in which it is sustained throughout, proves beyond controversy, his entire devivedness to the art. "Oh! what an extraordinary blessed genius must that man have had who first invented vating and drashing." We subjoin the following extract as a happy specimen of the author's taken like author's taken like author to not everlant State and France. renting little volume is inter

This is good nature-good sentimentsmay venture to assert, without fear of contradic-tion—good poetry, and evidence of good breeding and feeding. If such poets, and there are many among us, of perhaps equal genius, were to re-ceive the encouragement they deserve, and which every noble minded American who has the honour of his country at heart, should not have every noble minded American who has the honour of his country at heart, should not hesitate to bestow, we should soon put our rivals to the blush, and hear no more of the taunting enquiry, " who reads an American book?" But, soldiers to fight well and poets to write well, should be well fed and well paid—for want and an empty stomach are "aore decryers of your" men of genius.

MODERN GALLANTRY.

In comparing modern with ancient manners, we of gallantry, as upon a thing altogether unknown to the old classic ages. This has been defined to consist in a certain obsequiousness, or deferential respect, paid to females, as females.

I shall believe it to be influential, when I can shut my eyes to the fact, that in England women are still occasionally—hanged.

I shall believe in it, when actresses are no longsubject to be hissed off a stage by gentlemen. I shall believe in it, when Dorimant hands a fish wife across the kennel; or assists the apple-wo man to pick up her wandering fruit, which some unlucky dray has just dissipated. I stuli believe in it, when the Dorimants [Dan-dies] in humbler life, who would be thought in their way notable adepts in this refinement, shall act upon it in places where they are not know think themselves not observed—when I shall the traveller for some rich tradesman part with his admired box coat, to spread it over the defence with him, drenched in the rain-when I shall no longer see a woman standing up in the pit of a London theatre, till she is sick and faint with the exertion, with men about her, seated at their ease, have more manners or conscience than the rest, significantly declares "she should be welcome to his seat, if she were a little younger and hands Place this dapper warehouseman, or that rider, in a circle of their own female acquaintance

Lastly, I shall begin to believe that there is some such principle influencing our conduct, when more than one half of the drudgery and coarse servitude of the world shall cease to be performed

Until that day comes, I shall never believe this boasted point to be any thing more than a conven-tional fiction; a pageant got up between the sears, in a certain rank, and at a certain time of life, in which both find their account equally.

I shall be even disposed to rank it among the salutary fictions of his, when in polite sircles I shall see the same attentions paid to age as to youth, to homely features as to handsome, to coarse implexions as to clear-to the woman, as she is a ot as she is a beauty, a fortune, or

I shall believe it to be something more than a name, when a well-dressed gentleman in a well-dressed company can advert to the topic of female old age without exciting, and intending to excite a sneer;—when the phrases "antiquated maiden," and such a one has "overstaid her market," pronounced in good company, shall raise immediate offence in man, or woman, that shall bear them the same to whom Edwards, the South Sea Company—the same to whom Edwards, the Shakspeare commentator, has addressed a fine sonnet—was the only pattern of consistent gallantry I have met with Though bred a Presbsterian, and brought up a merchant, he was the finest gentleman of his time. He had not one system of attention to females in the drawing room, and another in the shop, or at the stall. I do not mean that he made no distinc-tion. But he never lost sight of sex, or overlook-ed it in the casualities of a disadvantageous situa-tion. I have seen him stand bare-headed—smile, tion. I have seen him stand bare-headed—amile, if you please—to a poor servant girl, while she has been inquiring of him the way to some street—in such a posture of unforced civility, as neither to embarrans her in the acceptance, nor himself in the offer, of it. He was no alongler, in the common acceptation of the word, after women: but he reverenced and upheld, in every form in which it came before him, womanheed. I have seen him.

ony, smile not—tenderly escorting a marketewo man, whom he had encountered in a shower, exaiting his umbrella over her poor backet of fruit, that it might receive no damage, with as much carefulness as if ahe had been a Countess. To the reverend form of F male Eich he would yield the wall (though it were to an ancient beggar woman) with more ceremony than we can afford to show our grandams. He was the Proxx Chevalier of Age; the Sir Calidore, or Sic Tristan, to those who have no Calidores or Tristans to defend them—The roses, that had long taded thence, still bloomed for him it those withered and yellow cheeks. the roses, that had long tailed throce, shit homeed for him is those withered and yellow checks.

He was never married, but in his vouch he paid his addresses or Busan Wions unley and Winstanley's daughter, of Clapron—who dying in the early day of their contribute, con-firmed in him the trasolution of perpetual bachelorahip. It was during their short courtship, he told me, that he had been one day treating his mistress with a profission of civil speeches—she common gallantries—to which kind of thing she had hitherto manifested no repur nance—but in this instance with no effect. He could not obtain from her a decent acknowledgement in return. She rather seemed to resent his compliments. He could not set it down to onprice, for the lady had always shown herself above that littleness. When he ventured on the following day, finding her a little better humoured, to exposulate with her unless of yesterday, she confessed, with her usual frankness, that she contessed, with her usual frankness, that she no sort of dislike to his actentions; that sin ld even endute some high-flown compliments. could even endate some nighthour companions; that a young woman placed in bersituation had a right to expect all sort of civil things said to her, that she hoped, she enuld digest a dose of adulation, short of insincerity, with as little injury to her humility as most young women; but that—a little before he had commenced his compliments—she had everheard him by accident, in either rough language, rating a young woman, who had not brought home his cravats quite to the appointed time, and she thought to herself, "As I am Miss time, and she thought to herself, "As I am Miss Susan Winstanley, a young lady—a reputed beauty, and known to be a fortune,—I can have my choice of the finest speeches from the mouth of this very fine gentleman who is courting me—but if I had been poor. Mary Such-a-one, (naming the Milliner)—and had failed of oringing home the erawats to the appointed hour—though perhaps I had set up half the night to forward them—what sort of compliments should I have received then? And my woman's pride came to my assistance; and I thought, if it were only to do me homour, a female, like myself, might have received handsomer mage; and I was determined not to accept any fine speeches, to the compromise of that sex, the helonging to which was, after all, my strongest claim and title to them."

I think the lady discovered both generosity, and a just way of thinking, in this rebuke which she gave her lover; and I have sometimes imagined, that the uncommon strain of courtesy, which through life regulated the actions and behaviour of my friend towards all of woman kind induscriminately owed its happy origin to this seasonable leason from the lips of his lamented mistress.

I wish the whole female world would entertain the same notion of these things, that his Winstanley showed. Then we should see something of the spirit of consistent gallantry, and no longer with the same notion of these things, that viss Winstanley showed. Then we should see something of the spirit of consistent gallantry; and no longer witness the anomaly of the same man—a pattern of true policiness to a wife—of cold contempt, or rodeness, to a sister—the idolater of his female mistress—the disparager and despiser of his no less female, aunt, or unfortunate—still female—maiden cousin. Just so much respect as a woman derogates from her own sex, in whatever condition placed—ber handmaid, or dejendant—she deserves to have diminished from herself on that score; and probably will feel the dimmution, when youth, and beauty, and advantages, not inseparable from sex, shall lose of their attraction. What a woman should demand of a man in courtship, or after it, is first—respect for her as she is a woman;

—and next to that—to be respected by him above all other women. But let her stand upon her femate character, as upon a foundation; and let the attentions, incident to individual preference, be so many pretty additaments, and ornaments—as many, and as farciful, as you please—to shat man atructure. Let her first lesson be—with sweet Susan Winstanley—to reversee her sex.

POR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST,

Massas Entrons-Observing in your paper freuent brief notices of Dramatic performances in our place and elsewhere, has recalled to my re-nembrance some ideas that occurred to me while visiting your city and attending such places of amusement. Whenever I have witnessed the representation of any character, by a being formed by one of nature's journeymen I have always left a considerable portion of irritation and diagust, and any one who has but occasionally visited your theatres, &c. must have at almost every such a visit been witnesses of such mock representations; but almost every performance and performer have

Being a dear lover of nature, I never could so much divest myself of the clown, and become so fashionable, as to be pleased with any caricatured representations of it. I have seen a full course of Tom Thumb, in the character of the "mad Ocwrest by his HERCULEAR POWERS, & SWOTE lavian," wrest by his MERCELEAR FOWERS, a word from a person thrice his statue, and awe him into nothingness by his gigantic appearance,—ver I did not, as did the noisy growd, appland it—I had not taste enough—I have seen a smoking tellow mouth and rant, and s'amp, and from, through a most sweet tragic speech, then never wait for the reply of his opponent, but coolly turn upon his heel, face the audience, and "g immig horribly a ghastly smile," show them what a huge set of teeth he had; we could not a did those who were teeth he had: yet could not as the those who were more competent, think he was " holding the mir ror up to nature " I have heard a fellow, through I shall believe it to be something more than a mane, when a well-dressed gentleman in a well dressed company cas advert to the topic of female side age without exciting, and intending to excite a side of the phrases "antiquated maiden," and such a one has "overstaid her market," pronounced in good company, shall raise immediate that them spoken.

I once advised him give dinners to his friends, like other a of his consideration. He compiled, at was of his party; but I found it and be served from a tavern, and, even in that was he said he found it so incompatible with convenience that he would never another. His habits are too unsettled the forms of society; he rises at all hour —goes to bed at all hours—ests any h and in any way—and is in all things it hour to hour, the creature of his person feelings. From this cause he never answ letters—often does not open them—ond, in his private connexions, is the most un-certain man alive. He is steady only in his devotion to the principles of liberty ! but unsteady even in his measures regarding them. The best of men, yet, from habits and personal indolence, the least useful man of his age.

GEORGE THE POURTH.

His majesty George the Fourth, though appily blending the utmost urbanity, with disposition at once social and festive, is said never to forget the dignity of his rank, or the respect that is due to it in the most convivial moments. Before his majesty succeeded to the throne, among the perso admitted to his parties at Carlton hous was a gentleman, who, though not of great rank or fortune, had frequently partaken of the festivities of the palace, and had been honoured with the distinguished attention of his p.ince. The gentleman, mistaking the politeness of the host, for a familiarity of a companion, had the impudence to make a bet with a nobleman, that he could use greater freedom with the prince than any other person, and that he would ever ask his royal highness to ring the bell the next time he visited Carlton house. It was not long before he had an invitation; and when the bottle had circulated pretty freely, he ventured to decide his wager by shy-ing familiarly, "Wales, ring the bell."-His royal highness, without being at all disconcerted by a freedom, which filled every one present with astonishment, rang the bell, and when the servant appeared, midly said, "show Mr. ___, his carriage."
The gentleman felt the keenness of his rnyal rebute, won his wager, but never entered Carlton house, or the presence of his prince afterwards

LAUGHING-" I never saw a French. man laugi:-they smile, they grin, they shrug up their shoulders, they dance, they cry Ha! and Ciel! but they never give themselves up to boisterous and unlimited laugeter.-They have always a reign upon their lungs, and their muscles are drilled to order. - Their mirth does not savour of flesh and blood. I do not mean to contend for that pampered laugh which grows less (sogin given to children stops their growth) -but for a good broad humourous English laugh, such as belongs to a farce or a fair. The Germans laugh sometimes, the Flemmings often, the Irish always: the Spaniard's face is fused, and the Scotchman's is thawed into a laugh; but a Frenchman never laughs. They smile indeed, but what then? Their smile is like their soupe maigre, thin; their mer iment squeezed and strained; there is something in it of the acid of their salads, something of the pungency of their sauces, but nothing substential: it is neither solid nor etherialbut a thing between wind and water, not of earth nor heaven-good nor bad, but villainously indifferent, and not to be admitted as mirtu." - London Magazine.

There is some sense in the following exract at least; whether it be common sense or not, we will not pretend to decide:

SENSE.—There are a great many gradations of wisdom among people-there is good sense, great sense, and fine and high sense, besides no sense and little sense; but the best kind of sense in my estimation, is that which is vulgariy denominated rommon sense. Your good sense is always running away with itself; your great sense is sure to have mischief at the bottom of it; your fine sense makes broken hearts, your righ sense broken heads; your no sense gnes blundering to the devil often, and your

From the "Harp of the Beech Woods," a volum of Poems, by a Lady, lately published at Moot rose, Susquehama county, Pennsylvania.

O'er fnggy fens we goblins ride, And flit around the moor fiend

Through tofted rushes, sedge and reeds, Through pends of slime and watery mead And when they get Their hosen wet, And away we hie, Laughing aloud right justily.

The heavy night mare we bestride, sick man's bosom sitting, With frightful eyes and visage wide,
When first his slumbers soft are knitting; He seems on joyous Journey gone, But labouring gets no footsteps on,

Then toppling starts, As sleep departs, Ho! ho! we cry, And away we hie, Laughing aloud right lustily.

And when the roar Of havock's o'er, Ho! ho! we cry, And away we hie, Laughing aloud right lustily.

From the Delaware Watchman, of June 17. Extract of a letter from Philadelphia, dated June 6

" A curious circumstance happened here, which covered that his runaway slave was in Phila phia. He gave a power of attorney to a person is or near Wilmington to take him up and bring him out of Pennsylvania, for which he was to have, a handsome reward. This person took another with him as a witness—neither of them knew the man owever frequented the oyster cellars and were familiar with the blacks till they found a man that knew the runaway, and who for a small bribe pointed him out to them. On this, the witness was no prove him in order to get a warrant to remove him out of the state. They did not take him im-mediately, but watched his haunts and waited a proper time when they might get him off without much trouble from the friends of the blacks.

Sam, the runaway, discovered that these two men were watching him, and he watched them as well. One evening just at dusk, which they thought the most proper time, as Sam was sawing his last stick of wood, with his eyes on the men across the street, they began to cross quietly over to him. Som was not to be taken, so he down saw and flew, the men pursued; the atreet at the time oretty clear of people. Sam gained considerably, and when he had got about two squares he took up an alley. At the mouth of this alley another black was standing. It instantly occurred to him (without knowing Sam or any of the circumstan-ces) that he would have some fun. He turned out and ran down street as bard as he could. The pursuers of poor Sam followed on, believing it was he same man, but could not catch him. He how ever after running two or three squares let thom come up, when being vexed with the chase he had given them, pirate like, they knocked him down for not beaving too sooner, and hurried him away to a justice, with whom they had previously con-certed their plans. The witness proved that he was the slave of the person that had given the power of attorney; and now the fun began. The squire asked the black man (whose name happenif he had any thing to say why he should not gran warrant to the men to take him to his state

I please—they come up and knock me down—now master I demand states warrant, for these men fo sault and battery and false prison." "Why Sam sault and battery and false prison." "Why Sam, you seem to know law, and talk as if you were a free man." "I am a free man, master, I think these men not citizen of the United States, and therefore cannot cognize—they may be English, with a vessel down the river to put poor negro is and take him to the West Indies and sell, I don't know, master will take care of them."—" Wel Sam, where was you born and where did you lear master Bioney, I make fire in the office and sweep it—then the young gentlemen learn me law; one say if I make so much dust be will sussurara me—that I think is whip me with eat nine tails. Another time one say if I make such a smoke he will sire. time one say if I starp peaking, like they do negro in Guinea to make it look pretty. Another time one threaten to deboue one me—that I think is cut off my head?"

The squire looked at the men and the men at the squire—they whispen.

"Sam you may go about your business."—

"Master I can't do that; I must not be knocked down and das prisus for nothing. I wish master would send automous for master Bunney to prove me free and tell me what to do." "Why, Sam, the mean are willing to make it on with you. when seem and tell me what to do." "Why, Sam, the men are willing to make it up with you;—what will you take, and have no more trouble?"—"Why, I think if master was on jury he would give me two or those hundred dollars for knock down in highway, and take prisoner, without any cause, but I will take 30 dollars." "That's too much, so will be a support of the contraction of Mr. Binney's advice.—Master, please send summons for Mr. Binney." The men offered 30 dollars. Sam said "on; I wish master send Mr. Binney." By this time people began to collect round the office—the men got uneary and paid the 50 dollars.—They never discovered the trick at the end of the alley, and Sam went off laughing.

Reported Capture of Maricaiba, and total defeat of Gen. Morales

Gen. Morales

We have had for several days past, flying reports of the fall of Maricaibo, and defeat of Gen. Morales,—all of which, however, wanted confirmation. By an arrival to-day from Aruba we have received the grateful intelligence that the reports are true, and that Maricaibo has actually surren-dered to the victorious arms of Colombia, and fall in the following manner:
On the 19th inst. two Spanish armed schooner sailed from Maricaibo for Porto Cabello, not knowing that the Colombian admiral, Padilla, had crossed the bar a few hours previous, and by whom they were shortly captured; the whole fleet then stood to the Lagoon, and at daylight Admiral Padilla manned these two Spanish schrs, with seamen and marines, ordered them to hoist Spanish colours, and make sail for the city, and that he would send a few sail in chase, which however should not over-take them: all things being prepared, at 7 A M the managewee commenced, the whole Colombia fleet made sail in chace of these two decoy vessels -they were seen by the forts, which not ing the trick, began to fire on the Colombi protect the supposed Spanish schooners, which anchored close under fort St. Carlos, and remained in battle array, firing blank cartridges at Padilla till his fleet engaged the forts.

A landing was then effected from the schooners, and the orews entered the fort with three cheers. in a few moments, however, the Spaniards found out the cheat, and were thrown into confusio out the cheat, and were thrown into confusion; this gallant little fraud of the Colombians harassed them in the rear, whilst Padilla in front was pouring in a galling fire—the earnsge now became dreadful; the Colombian brig of war Mars, was sunk by a point blank shot, and nearly all on board perished. Morales finding his situation a bad one, retreated with his army to Gibraltar, leaving Admiral Padilla and the Colombian forces in possession of his attempt hold site force, but a force in possession of his attempt hold site force, but a force in possession of his attempt hold site force, but a force in possession of his attempt hold site attempt. session of his strong hold, the forts being manner by the Petriota and their flags hoisted, they pre-ceeded towards the city, "which immediately ral lied round the standard of Liberty." Morales no thinking himself safe, went on towards Porto Ca-bello, taking Coro in his way. When two days march from Coro, near Valencia, he fell in with the advance guard of Gen. Paez—an action ensued, and Morales' army was completely routed.— in this, as in several other actions, the Spanish General displayed a want of courage, leaving the field of battle, and his army to the mercy of the

We acknowledge the favour of a comm tion which we are willing to believe was sent us by the writer with feelings of regard for our welfare, therefore, we are free to coufess, that his opinion and ours exactly coincide with respect to the sublication of matters of difference among pro fessing Christians. We mentioned it before, though it may not have been noticed by our con respondent, that, as this paper was never intended to be the vehicle of religious controversy all such subjects would be carefully avoidedand although we may have been led out of this ourse by too much popular excitement, we have still our main object in view, the publication of an impartial Newspaper, for the edification o Pamily circles, and their improvement in correct and wholesome morals. The writer can have his manuscript again by sending to the office.

The counting-house, No. 51 South Wharves occupied by Mr. Cyrus Pierce, was forcibly en ered on Tuesday night last, for the purpose of plunder. The only articles, however, which the narauders carried away were a coat and pantaoons, a three dollar New-Hope note, and a counterfeit Baltimore bill. The desks and drawers were nearly all broken open, and their contents trewed over the floor.

On Friday night, last week, the Furniture wareroom of Mr. Robert West, in Walnut street, was also robbed of a few trifling articles, by some person or persons unknown, who came prepared with a chissel and rasp, both of which, after breaking open the desk, drawers, &c. in the lower room, they left behind them.

On Wednesday morning, Sarah Maland, Sarah Parish, Rosanna Overn, Elizabeth Sheppard and Jeremiah Moore, were arraigned before the Mayor, on a charge of having entered into a conspiracy to pass, and with having passed, certain counterfeit notes. Mr. Phillips, who, we presume, is counsel for the defendants, stated that Ann Carson, now in gaol on the same charge, was sick, lame, and unable to attend court. consequence of this information, the trial was postponed until Monday next, at 10 A. M. and the prisoners remanded to prison.

Preparations are making, with renewed inter est, throughout the Union, to welcome the re-turn of the anniversary of American independence. Blessed as we are with the finest system of government in the world, the people are too happy, and liberal sentiments too general, to suffer party or sectional interests to divide them on this joyous occasion.

The Mayor, it seems, has taken measures prevent the recurrence of those disgusting scenes which have been regularly transacted on each return of the fourth of July, in the most public grounds and highways of the city, to the disgrace and danger of the morals of the rising commu nity. The erection of tents, booths, &c. within the precincts of the city, are strictly forbid under the penalty of the law; and the Mayor enjoins it on all persons in the service of the corporation to give notice of all and every encroachment on the peace and good order of the day, that the offenders may be legally convicted and punished. A prohibition, by this energetic chief magistrate, against crowding the centre square and common with petty gambling establishments has also added to the obligations for which the community are already so much indebted.

The theatre at Baltimore closed on Saturday vening last, with the "Lady of the Lake," and other entertainments, for the benefit of Mr. and Mrs. Burke, This company have gone on to Washington city, where they opened for a short season, on Thursday evening last, with the comedy of the West Indian.

A gentleman of Huntsville, Alabama, remitted per mail to John Carrell, jun. of this city, on the 18th of March last, two bank notes of the following description, which have never come to hand One $100 note of Darien Bank, Geo. dated Aug. 1, 1820, letter A. No. 582; and one $50 note of U. S. Bank, No. 891, dated Nov. 18, 1820. The same gentleman also states that many other let ers, enclosing drafts and other pap been intercepted on the same route.

We assure our fair readers that it gives us much pleasure to lay before them, the following extract rom a letter written by a distinguished English gentleman at Jerusalem, to his friend in this city. It contains a brief but merited encomium on the talents of the American Ladies, which may be considered as the candid sentiments of the writer: It is copied from the United States Gazette of yesterday morning. " I now address you from the Holy City, from Jerusalem-that town which I have so often heard you say, you had such a desire to visit; and when wandering in its slovenly streets, and amongst its ruinous sepulchres, I miss my pleasant companion at Paris. I have, however, had the satisfaction of meeting with some countrymen of yours, viz. a gentleman, lady, and suite, from Tunis .-They are the most interesting people I have ever met with; in consequence I have formed a strict intimacy with them. The Lady speaks the Turkish language fluently, and has translated several books into English, one of which I have read in anuscript; it reflects the highest credit on her. I have been much benefitted in my literary researches, by her wonderful talents and profound knowledge. I can see you are laughing at my enthusiasm; as you have so often heard me speak contemptuously of female talents. I must confess it has remained for an American Lady, in a remote part of the world, to render me ashamed of my former opinions. Indeed, I remain still under the impression that the females of Europe are not gifted with the same strength of intellect as the males. You Am cricons are of another growth, and I fancy that the order is reversed, d the ladies have the advantage over their

The states of Ohio and Kentucky have projected a canal by the falls of Louisville. A canal there, of but two miles and a half in extent, and the cost of which would not exceed $150,000, would make the navigaion complete from Pittsburg to New Orleans. The extra expense of transportation round the falls, amounted last year to as nuch as the canal would cost.

A letter from the West, states, that the New York Canal Commissioners, have determined to terminate the great Western Canal, at Black Rock, instead of Buffalo. This unexpected decision is said to have created great excitement at Buffalo, and w have been received with surprise at Black Rock.

Quarantine .- It has been erroneously staed in some of the N. Y. papers that it was one of the officers of the British sloop of war Athol, who violated the quarantine law by escaping. The person was a Mr. Humphreys, a passenger from the West-Indies, pelonging to Philadelphia. He was apprehended on Saturday last, and after an examination, during which he was quite fractious, has been sent down to the quaranting ground in custody.

The late storm so severely felt in New York and elsewhere, reached Montreal, where it was attended with tremendous thunder. Part of the fence of the govern ment wood yard at Laprairie was burned y lightning; the whole would in all probability have been consumed had it not been prevented by the rain which fell in torrents, and extinguished the fire; and ome of the uprights of the fence were driven with great violence to the distance of more than forty yards.

Mobile has been visited with unusual swarms of flies, which almost filled the air and covered the houses, and sides and shrouds of the vessels in port, se as to obscure the walls of the former, and the canvas of the latter. The swarms floated in the air like clouds. The Mobile editor says, the fly, in its character and appearance, comes nearer the ephemera or day fly, as described by Barbut, than any thing we know of.

Another Burning .- Another quantity of Kentucky Bank Bills have been committed to the flames, amounting to the sum of 100,000 dollars. The Kentucky Argus says, this sum alone, in the expenses of isswing it, and the interest paid by the state, has cost 13,202 dollars. In addition to this the paper had depreciated nearly one half, whole sum being worth, at the time of burning, only 56,368 dollars.

A Mr. John Dudley, of Mount Pleasant (Pa.) while standing under a tree during a late tounder gust, was struck with lightning just below the left shoulder. The fluid passed round his body, down his right less tearing his stocking and the shoe complete ly to pieces. Mr. D. had three watches him, each of which was in part melted, and his flesh was burnt in some places. He was struck down insensible; out recovered in 15 or 20 minutes.

The Legislature of Connecticut at their ate session, passed a law empowering any Justice of the Peace, in cases of convic for theft, or breach of the peace before such Justice, at his discretion to sentence the delinquent (on his failure to pay the fine and cost incurred by law) to hard laber in the work house, for a term not exceeding ninety days for the first offesce, not exceeding six months for any quent offence.

"You shall stay the bleeding of the nose, if you write with the same blood, on the forehead of the party that bleeds, these words following:—"Consummatum est"—a thing proved with many."

ENGLISH POETS - Fromas Moore has just ENGLISH POETS—Tromas Moore has Just finished h's Fubles of Congress, and a new edition of the Loves of Angels, and is on the point of returning to his cottage in Wiltshire. Wordsworth is no a tour in Holland. Southey is expected very shortly in London, with a new puem, the hero of which is a Quaker. Rogers has prepared a new edition of his poem on Italy, which was published anonymously last year. Coleridge still continues to rusticate under the kind and hospitable mansion of his friend at Highgate. Charles Lamb peram bulates between his snug little villa at Dolston and the India House—whilst the Great Unknown remains afternately at Abbotsford, and at his resimains alternately at Abbotsford, and at his redence, in Edinburgh, contemplating another new novel, that which has been for some time an nounced as being nearly ready for publication.— Mors. ### ALEXANDER, THE PROPHESIED!

Whether as a trick of state, or the result of mad-ness, it appears that the Russian Czar imagines himself to be named in the book of "Revelations." A private letter from Paris says :

"It is confidently reported that Alexander is is it is confidently reported that Alexander is deeply touched in the brain. The only book he reads at present is the Apocalype, in which he thinks he has discovered that he is destined to be the conqueror of Spain, and the destroyer of the hydra of liberalism in Europe; after which a millemium is to commence, during which his family is to reign in the plenitude of despotism for a thousand years; and be talks confidently of living to the age of a hundred himself. It appears almost the age of a hundred himself. It appears almost ridiculous to write down seriously such absurdities; but be assured that they come from Pozzi di Bor-go's hotel, who is so convinced of the crack in his master's brain, that he would willingly quit the Russian service for any thing approaching to an equivalent in a more civilized and secure quarter Pozzi di Borgo may go where he likes ; he can not prevent the accomplishment of the prophecy:

"Verily, Verily, I say unto you, that the Man of the North, who has arisen from little, shall be one the North, who has arisen from intitle, shall be one day very great." See the "Chinese Spy," in which the conquests of these Northern men are predicted to extend somewhat further than the tory party in Bruain would wish to see verified. It is there said, that the Galmucs and Tartars shall erect their hus on the smoking ruins of London! The most direct and effectual way to prevent the accomplishment of this prophecy, is to meet and resist the march of these barbarians over the sunny and civilized countries of Europe—to stop this mad, modern A.exander—this second Jupiter tonans, and

We learn, says the New-York Evening Post, from a gentleman, who lately visited Curracoa, that Mr. Irvine, who had been doomed to work in the Salt Mines for 30 years, by the tribunal of that island, had appealed from the sentence to the Mother Country, and that he would, in consequence, be sent to Holland, where, it was expect ed, he would be acquitted.

SUICIDE .- On Monday evening last, a man who called himself Williams, and who came from the neighbourhood of Albany, in the state of New-York, where he said he had three children, entered a public house in Baltimore, and asked for a glass of Holland Gin. On receiving the liquor, he mixed with it as much arsenic as would destroy at least 100 men, and drank it off! His intentions were not suspected until too late, when all the medical aid which was so promptly and generous ly rendered by Doctor Winwood could not restore him. It was about 10 o'clock when he swallowed the deadly draught, and he was a corpse in a few hours after.

NEW YORK, June 27. FEVER AT THE QUARANTINE.

We learn from the Quarantine ground this morning, that Mrs. Britton, niece of Mr. Joseph Silvia, who died a few days since at Staten Island of Yellow Fever, also died last night of the same disease. The mate who joined the brig Emeline, since she arrived from St. Jago de Cuba, also died last night of the yellow fever, and two more of the crew are now very sick of the same disease. These cases afford additional evidence, if evidence were wanting, of the importation of the disease.

From New-Orleans .- The schr. Enterprize, at this port, left N. Orleans on the 8th inst. A paper of that morning, stated that the River had fallen about 7 inches at the town, but was still rising at the mouth of the Ohio, and the upper country was so inundated as to cause great destruction to the crops .-Capt.
